Ask your partner:

- Do you have any techniques that help you work more efficiently? What are they?
- What do you do when you are getting behind in your work?

- Adam: Yes. Mr. Brody asked me if I could answer some phone and e-mail inquiries. That needs attending to first, I think. I can get that done quickly by using my laptop and the mail server.
- Boris: Good. Most of our inquiries are urgent and require responding promptly.
- Adam: Okay. I can get to the most urgent ones by organizing them by date.
- Boris: So, next I need to you get on the phone with our supplier. This is a really important job, and it needs to be done carefully. This supplier is a source for many different products, and it's crucial that we get the order correct so that the paper fits in the machine. We need to have an exact idea of what the finished product will look like, so it needs to be pre-printed exactly like the final product will be.
- Adam: Okay. What exactly needs ordering?
- Boris: I'll get you the forms. Specific order forms need to be filled out. After you call and place the order, the forms need to be filed with the accounts payable department. By filing the forms, you will complete the order. If the forms aren't filed properly, the order won't be filled by the supplier. They are pre-paid for this product. Do you understand everything?
- Adam: Yes, I think so. I'll order the paper using the forms. Giving the forms to accounts payable will finalize the order.

Learning Points

Need + Verb + ing

When you use the verb need, you talk about what is necessary. You can use a gerund (verb+ing) after the verb need when you want to talk about fixing or improving things, but without saying who is going to do it.

Subject + Need + Verb + ing

The floor needs washing.

When you use need with a gerund (v-ing), it has a passive meaning. In other words, the doer or the agent of the sentence is not mentioned because the focus is on the receiver of the action (in the example above, it is the floor).

Examples:

- I know that Mr. Brody already told you what needs doing.
- I'm going to tack on a few things that need resolving over the week.
- That needs attending to first, I think.
- What exactly needs ordering?
- Let's go through what needs completing this week.

Learning Points

Clauses with Verb+ing

When you use a clause with verb+ing, there are some rules you need to keep in mind.

You can use a clause with a gerund (verb+ing) as the subject or the complement of a sentence.

As the subject:

Working late at night is stressful.

As the complement:

It is stressful working late at night.

A complement is a group of words that give another word more meaning. You can use them after adjectives, like stressful.

Other clauses with v-ing come after prepositions:

I can get that done quickly by using my laptop and the mail server.

Examples:

- Most of our inquiries are urgent and require responding promptly.
- I can get to the most urgent ones by organizing them by date.
- I'll order the paper using the forms.
- Giving the forms to accounts payable will finalize the order.
- By filing the forms, you will complete the order.
